

SOCIETY

1911.
Hello, folks
Good luck, good good cheer
I've just arrived—
The brand New Year.
So greet me with
A pleasant smile.
I'll be with you
A little while;
And then like all,
In prose or rhyme
I'll amble down
The path of time.
I wish you health,
And then some more.
With joys and blessings
Many a score.
The best of all
Life has to give—
In peace and plenty
May you live,
And thrive and prosper
On your ways,
An in gladness
All your days.
So, here's to you
And all your folks.
May life be one
Long happy joke.
May troubles never
Come your way;
May you be cheerful
Night and day.
And may God's bounty
Grace your path;
May you be spared
From woe or wrath
And when you die,
A place in heaven—
My New Year wish.
Yours,
Nineteen-leven.

SCOPE OF CARNEGIE'S GREAT DONATION TO WORLD PEACE

(By E. W. Simonson).

The world cannot but express an interest in Mr. Carnegie's gift of $10,000,000 towards the abolition of international war. This interest deepens with the announcement that he twenty-four trustees of the fund have chosen Mr. Elihu Root as their president, and that the leaders of the board of trustees are such men as Dr. Eliot, the ex-president of Harvard, Dr. Butler, the president of Columbia university, Mr. Choate, and Mr. A. D. White, a former ambassador to Berlin.

The meaning of the movement, as at first apparent, is, that a body of influential and capable men will exercise a free hand in the expenditure of $10,000,000 annually in promoting international peace. But politicians and patriots of two continents are predicting the manner of its expenditure. This prediction rests upon the corroboration that Mr. Carnegie has given to a part of an address delivered a year ago by President Taft to the "Peace and Arbitration Society" of New York. The subject matter referred to is the president's statement that "national honor" appears to many as the greatest barrier to be overcome; and that he could not understand why this as well as any question of property right or of national proprietorship could not be referred to a "Court of Arbitration." Mr. Carnegie quotes the president in another address: "No man ever touched another man's honor; no nation ever dishonored another nation; all honor's wounds are self-inflicted."

Leading journalists in England, and a few in this country, assume that Mr. Carnegie's views of war are that it is a disease; and they predict that the first expenditure of income from the $10,000,000 fund will be to make a diagnosis of the cause of war and of their effect upon the bodies politic which have taken part in them.

This suggests the friendly controversy that has been going on for some time between Mr. Carnegie and the editor of "The London Post." The latter made criticism of Mr. Carnegie's peace doctrine and sought to justify his position by an appeal to the teaching of the Civil War in the United States. It was claimed that the good results of the re-establishment of the Union and abolition of slavery could not have been produced by any form of arbitration. Mr. Carnegie explained that "civil war" did not enter the class of operations which he wished to prevent by arbitration. To the Englishman the distinction between civil war and industrial war and international war hardly seemed to carry with it a sufficient difference to make it worth while to abolish one while leaving the other permissible.

It seems certain to us that it the parties to it before the war began were members of the same confederacy—a confederacy whose constitution plainly bound them to settle any disputes by arbitration. The question may be asked, "Was this war Civil or International?" Evidently, there is room for diagnosis on the part of the trustees of the Carnegie fund, if only to discover what "international" was.

Again it will be interesting to learn from them just what "international honor" is. Place our Monroe Doctrine beside this term of "national honor." Imagine a disagreement arising between us and a European power in which we assert and believe that that other power was proposing to violate the Monroe Doctrine. Suppose it suggested by President Taft, Mr. Carnegie, or any other influential man or "peace-board" to submit the dispute to arbitration, and that when this was done an answer was returned in the negative; would the point of honor enter?

Might it not be stated then that the Monroe Doctrine expresses the will of the United States and that a nation's honor is thought to consist in its raving its own will. It is a great question. The world is more than ever interested in it. That this interest should intensify with the Catholic outlook of this the greatest age of history encourages us to give to the most fond hope for universal peace. Many today doubt the prospect of two nations submitting to arbitration in a quarrel in which either of them thinks that some principle vital to its welfare is at stake. To have the doubt removed would be to us a source of unalloyed pleasure and Americans will feel proud of the part they play in making it possible that nations should so understand one another and respect one another that wars should cease. We all appreciate the importance of the task laid upon the trustees of the Carnegie Peace Fund,—the duty of an exhaustive study of the actual history of war.

ELECTION NOTICE NOT RECEIVED BY BOARD

The board of supervisors of Cochise county so far have received no official notification to the effect that there is to be an election on the ninth of February for the purpose of the adoption or rejection of the constitution of the state of Arizona. As a consequence the board has made no appointment of election officers or ordered the printing on any election supplies for the primary precincts, so that officially no action has been taken to hold the election in Cochise county. Should the notice be received now it will be necessary for the board to hold a special session to attend to this work as the board now stands at adjournment until the regular meeting next month on the first Monday which is the sixth, which would not give time enough to attend to the legal formalities. Some action is expected by the territorial officials during the present week in regard to the matter. The matter cannot be disposed of at one meeting of the
